What is CareWindow?

CareWindow is a videophone that is easy to use.

It is similar to an iPad that lets people communicate with others who are physically far away.

CareWindow is a way for people to talk to their loved ones including:

- Family.
- Friends.
- Other people they are close to.

It is helpful for older people living in aged care and those with disability who receive help at home with everyday activities.

How does CareWindow work?

CareWindow connects to the internet through Wi-Fi, like a computer. It can also connect using a SIM card like a mobile phone.

The person using the CareWindow puts it somewhere in their house, such as on a coffee table.

The CareWindow user's family can make calls to them from a mobile phone or tablet. They can call them from home, from work, or anywhere in the world.

The CareWindow user can talk to their family. They can see them on the video screen and hear them through the speaker.

Only people who are saved as invited contacts on CareWindow will be able to call users.

This means that people do not have to worry about companies unexpectedly calling them to sell them things they do not want to buy.

When someone receives calls from their invited contacts, CareWindow will answer the call for them, meaning users will not have to touch the screen or press any buttons.

People can also use CareWindow as an easy way to tell the time.

It has big numbers that tells users what the date and time are.
